Author's Notes:
Day five of the thirty-day drabble challenge!

Alex took a toke off the joint and turned to hand it to John, but the drummer was snoring softly. That left him and Geddy.

Maybe today's the day I tell him, he thought through the clouds of smoke in his mind. The feelings had been building for months now. He's my friend. He won't be mad. He didn't dare hope that his love would be returned.

Geddy was smiling at him, loose-limbed and fuzzy. Alex opened his mouth to confess.

"Hey man, pass the weed," said John's groggy voice from just outside Alex's vision. The moment disappeared into memory.
